

Compression Socks

Compression socks are elastic stockings manufactured to help control edema (swelling) in the residual limb. These stockings are available in varying degrees of compression. They are often used by new amputees during healing and by patients who require help with ongoing fluid control.

Photo courtesy of Knit-Rite

Modern Technology. Traditional Values. Proven Techniques.