

Nudge Control Unit

The nudge control unit is a paddle-shaped device that is used by upper extremity amputees. It is often activated by the patient's chin. It is typically prescribed when other body movements are not available. The nudge control can be used to provide small amounts of cable excursion, to lock and unlock a prosthetic elbow, or to control a wrist unit.

Photo courtesy of Fillauer Companies