

Internal/External Locking Elbow

The locking elbow is used by transhumeral (above elbow) amputees. This elbow allows the amputee eleven locking positions of flexion controlled by the cable system of the prosthesis. The locking elbow has manual friction positioning for internal and external rotation.

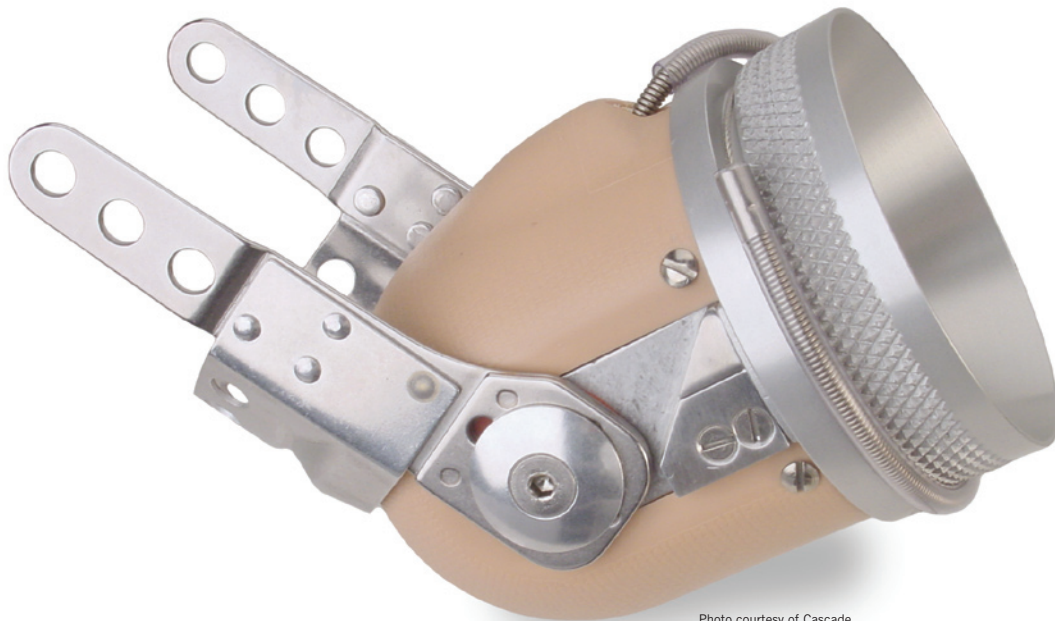

Photo courtesy of Cascade