

Voluntary Opening Terminal Device

The voluntary opening terminal device is held closed by a rubber band or spring. It opens when the amputee actively opens it with the cable control of the prosthesis.

Photo courtesy of Fillauer Companies

Modern Technology. Traditional Values. Proven Techniques.