

Wrist Disarticulation

A wrist disarticulation procedure is the surgical separation of the wrist and hand from the arm. In this surgery the radius and ulna (lower arm bones) are separated from the carpal (wrist) bones. The hand and wrist are then removed from the body. No bones are cut during this surgery.

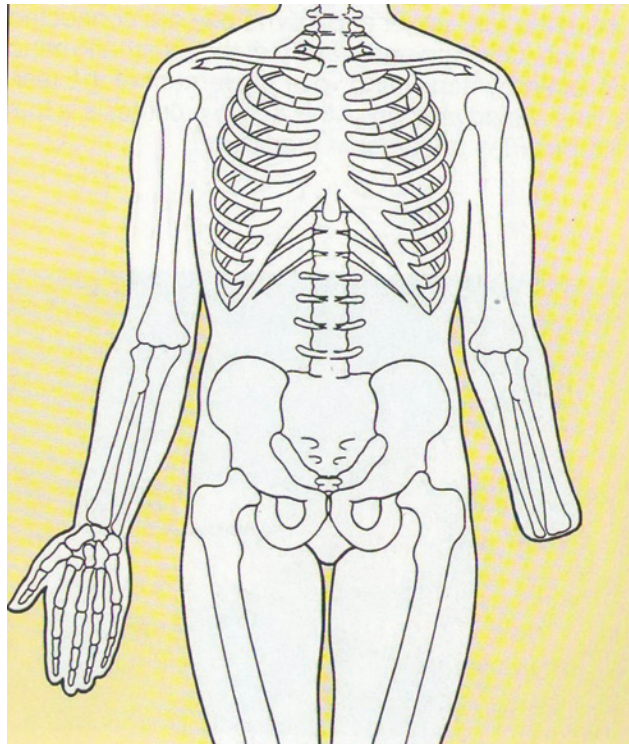

Photo courtesy of Otto Bock Healthcare

Modern Technology. Traditional Values. Proven Techniques.